WIND and showers couldn't burst the bubble for families at summer fun days on Glasgow's South Side.

Little Tony Wilson, 5, above, had a ball with giant bubble-blowing kits at Queen's Park yesterday, after a similar event in King's Park in Saturday.

Hundreds of people attended the fun days where other attractions included Happy the Clown, left, music and dancing stages, falconry displays, and bouncy castles.

Face painters, a chance to see Highland Cattle and reptiles, and fun learning games organised by the council's countryside rangers were also on offer for children.

Queen's Park also had model boat exhibits and displays at the boating pond to celebrate the park's Model Boat Club's 100th regatta year.

The fun days ran from noon to 5pm and were organised by agencies including the council's land and environmental services, the South East Community Planning Partnership, Culture and Sport Glasgow, and local community councils.
